

SJIF Impact Factor (2015) :4.138

EPRA International Journal of Environmental Economics, Commerce and Educational Management

Vol. 3 April - March 2016-17

ISSN : 2348 - 814X

GOVERNANCE, PUBLIC POLICIES TO COMBAT AGRARIAN CRISIS IN INDIA

Prof.B.Ananda Naidu¹ & Dr.T.S.Shyam Prasad²

ABSTRACT

India is a federal democratic country. In the federal system of government, two units of governments are functioning. They are Centre and State governments. These governments are performing based on the Constitutional procedures. In the federal system of government, the focus is on the welfare of the human beings in the society i.e. the primary and important aim of the governments at the centre as well as at state level. The centre and state governments have been initiating so many policies for the development of states. Yet, these policies have contributed to states to some extent. There is a wide gap between expectations and accomplishments. In addition to it, lack of sound policy and the lacuna in the implementation has been the crux of the overall policy process.

KEYWORDS: agriculture, milk, pulses and spices, capital formation, Green Revolution, economic planning. _____

¹Professor & Head, Dept. of Political Science & Public Administration, Sri Krishnadevaraya University, Anantapuram-515 003, State of Andhra Pradesh.

²Lecturer in Political Science, Government College (UG & PG), Anantapuram-515 003, State of Andhra Pradesh.
