ABSTRACT

India which had poverty reduction as the central focus of its development strategy over the last 50 years, not able to get desired results. Even economy able to grow at the 6% growth rate in last two decade but the concerning fact is that poverty decline in only modest pace and inequality increased in post reform era. Poor implementation of poverty reduction and other social welfare programs, rampant corruptions are the main reasons of poverty failure. In 11th plan the government India shifted to inclusive growth strategies. Inclusive growth take care of all section of society which require effective policy implementation and an administration responding to vulnerable and still neglected section( women, SC, ST, Minority, Elderly, Disabled) . Governments all efforts to achieve rapid and inclusive development will not successful if good governance is not ensured in implementation of programmes and the way government interacts with the ordinary citizen. Inclusive development requires inclusive governance. This paper will analyzed government efforts of inclusive development and state of governance in India.
